The sound of the Shofar
Woke me up from my sleep
Like the light of the Zohar
To a place dark and deep
Like a baby's crying
I looked for the source
I stood from my lying
With an uncommon force

I tripped and stumbled In search of the sound Until I was humbled And then I was found

In the Schul Yom HaDin As I started to weep The sound from within Was a sound so deep!

It was a sound of fear Mixed with elation That Moshiach's here! Since the time of creation

He only waits to be woken From his long deep sleep By a sound long and broken That sounds like a weep

HASHEM is our King! That's the cry Now, let Moshiach's alarm ring And split the sky! Torah.org
